Yeshiva University Seeks 25 Million In Three Years For Medical School Open To All

A medical and dental centre is to be established in New York by Yeshiva University, to be opened in the fall of 1952. The school will be the first one established in New York in fifty-two years. A $25,000,000 drive for funds is under way. The university, located at Amsterdam Avenue and 186th Street, expects to have $1,000,000 by January 15.

An advisory council on medical education, consisting of leading scientists and physicians, is being formed. The university is seeking the best medical talent in America as administrative and instructional advisers.

Permission for Yeshiva, the first American university under Jewish auspices, to conduct medical and dental education leading to the degrees of Doctor of Medicine (M.D.) and Doctor of Dental Surgery (D.D.S.) has been granted by the New York State Board of Regents, reports the New York Times.

According to Dr. Samuel Belkin, president, the only criteria for admission will be ability and character. Negotiations are underway for the medical school's affiliation with New York hospitals. The fund-raising goal for 1951 is $10,000,000, the sum needed to open the school in 1951, and the campaign will open at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel on January 11. Within three years, the university officials hope, the $25,000,000 total will have been obtained.

"In the development of our medical school, we shall be guided by an Advisory Council on Medical Education, comprising leading medical educators and physicians, now in formation," Dr. Belkin said. "We appreciate fully the confidence that has been placed in us by the state and we hope that we shall live up to this debt by establishing a school that will be a credit to American education."

Dr. Belkin said that the Council would consist of distinguished physicians, "men, who have already made their lasting contributions to the advancement of medical science." Among other things, the Council will make a thorough study of the particular contributions which Yeshiva can make in medical science.

Citing the need for additional medical facilities, Dr. Belkin said that in almost all fields of education the colleges and universities had kept pace with the population growth. However, while New York's population has increased 4,600,000 since 1900, no new medical schools have been organized since 1898, he said. As far as the state is concerned the new school will be the first one in twenty-five years.

Dr. Belkin pointed out that in New York State, with a population of 14,830,000, there are nine medical schools with a total of 2,316 students and 581 graduates this year.

"In seeking to establish a medical school," Dr. Belkin continued, "Yeshiva University is governed by the consideration that it is anxious to render service to our nation and especially to solidify Jewish contributions to American higher and professional education. As the first American university under Jewish auspices, Yeshiva University is deeply concerned in blazing a trail of its own in the field of higher education in conformity with the great American democratic traditions of education and in harmony with the spiritual heritage of Judaism."

Dr. Jacob I. Hartstein, dean of the graduate division, who served as the liaison between the university and the State Education Department in completing the negotiations, said that the goal of Yeshiva University's medical school would be to relieve the growing need for medical personnel in the critical days ahead, reports the New York Times. Pointing to the nation-wide shortage of physicians, Dr. Hartstein said that "it is our intention to alleviate, in some measure, this serious situation which affects directly our nation's health and well-being."

Yeshiva University comprises eight schools and divisions with an enrollment of 2,000 students from all parts of the world. Founded in 1897 as an institute for the training of rabbis, the college has expanded during the last five years to university status. It added the School of Education and Community Administration two years ago.

Refugee Built Up Texas Orchestra

Max Reiter, forty-five, who founded the highly regarded San Antonio Symphony Orchestra shortly after fleeing to the U. S. as a political refugee from his native Italy, died in Santa Rosa Hospital of a heart attack.

When Mr. Reiter, who had been conductor at the Royal Conservatory of Music in Milan and of the Augusteo Orchestra in Rome, arrived in New York City from Europe in 1939, he had $40 in his pocket and a letter of introduction from Arturo Toscanini. He picked Texas as the place to build his own orchestra and, armed with $217 he had saved in New York and a list of eighteen cities, Mr. Reiter headed for the Lone Star State. His first stop was Waco, a city of less than 100,000 in 1939.

There, he was given permission to rehearse Baylor University's orchestra and band. In four weeks he had given a concert that was successful beyond the boundaries of Waco. San Antonio expressed interest, and Mr. Reiter was made permanent symphony conductor in both cities. He built the San Antonio orchestra — the first big symphony in the state — to a position of nation-wide recognition, starting from a scratch collection of local musicians. In recent years he had devoted most of his attention to the San Antonio orchestra.

The symphony's fifteen subscription concerts annually were played to audiences of more than 5,000 at each performance. The orchestra made fifty other concert appearances.

Premier Says He Just Had To Get Away

Premier David Ben-Gurion returned to Israel after a three-week vacation spent in Greece, Britain, and Southern France. On landing at Lydda Airport, the Premier brushed aside all questions about a reported meeting with British and other diplomats. "Believe me, I went for a rest," he told reporters. "I had tried to rest in this country but they wouldn't let me." The premier explained his departure had been kept secret for security reasons.

Opposition circles were skeptical about the private nature of Mr. Ben-Gurion's journey. Communist Parliament member Shmuel Mikunis introduced a motion in the House for debate on the "Premier's negotiations" abroad.

"Critic," writing in "London Diary," of the New Statesman and Nation, says:

"There have been so many rumours about Mr. Ben-Gurion's secret visit to this country last week that it is worth stating the facts. The Israeli Prime Minister flew here for the sole purpose of spending four days at Blackwell's Bookshop in Oxford Street. His Cabinet and diplomatic advisers all tried to dissuade him on the grounds that no-one would believe such a ridiculous story. But it happens to be true. Ben-Gurion is a keen Platonist — he learnt ancient Greek ten years ago in order to read The Republic and Blackwell's has a fine collection of Platonic Scholastic. He is also tired of politics after an extended Cabinet crisis. In an age of barbarism, it is a pleasant thought that anyone who penetrated to the back rooms of Blackwell's last week and spied a little white-haired man on the top of a step-ladder would have seen a Prime Minister indulging his secret vice."

Woman Was Early Labor Law Champion

Miss Josephine Goldmark, a pioneer in the movement for protective labor laws, died in White Plains, N. Y., Hospital at the age of 73. Her residence was in nearby Hartsdale. A slight, modest woman whose name rarely appeared in newspapers, Miss Goldmark was associated for many years with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, former Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Justice Felix Frankfurter and the late Justice Louis D. Brandeis, her brother-in-law.

As research director of the National Consumers League, she compiled the facts and figures that went into many briefs submitted in support of early laws limiting working hours or regulating employment conditions. With Justice Brandeis, while he was still counsel for the Consumers' League, she prepared the brief in 1916 that helped with a test case on New York's recently adopted law banning night work for women. She also worked on test cases dealing with social legislation in many other states.

Miss Goldmark's research resulted in the publication of several studies which had a profound influence in her field. Foremost among these was her book, "Fatigue and Efficiency," published by the Russell Sage Foundation in 1912. This was generally credited with being the first scientific presentation of evidence that efficiency decreases with fatigue and it was an important weapon in the fight for shorter working hours.

Born in Brooklyn, the youngest of ten children of Joseph and Regina Goldmark, who had come to America from Austria in 1848, she attended private schools in New York and was graduated from Bryn Mawr in 1898. Soon after she left Bryn Mawr, she became associated with the late Mrs. Florence Kelley, general secretary of the National Consumers League, which was founded in 1899, and as the league's research director she took an active part in many early battles for social reform, says the New York Times.

Besides helping on test cases, Miss Goldmark worked from 1912 to 1914 with the Factory Investigating Committee that was appointed after the Triangle Shirt Factory fire. Among the members of this committee, which recommended many labor law reforms, were the late Alfred E.

Claims Only Unity Can Bring Peace To Humanity

Benjamin Cohen, Assistant Secretary General of the United Nations, said in New York that hundreds of millions of people living in sub-human status constituted a bar to peace and that the world could no longer remain indifferent to the plight of human beings anywhere. In an address before 800 delegates to the seventh annual conference of the Council of Organizations for Yeshiva University, Mr. Cohen termed present tensions unparalleled but expressed confidence that peoples "inside, outside and behind any curtain" would achieve the peace they all desire.

Mr. Cohen bespoke the determination of united free peoples to resist all aggression in the future through the exercise of moral power. While present tensions could not be expected to disappear overnight, he said, he saw "a spiritual awakening to the unity of the human race" that eventually would bring peace, reports the New York Times.

He referred also to the heartening fact that the smaller nations were "exercising every influence, every effort, to find a settlement of present difficulties."

Other speakers included Dr. Mordecai Soltes, Professor of Community Service; Louis Levine, national chairman of the council who was re-elected for the seventh consecutive year, and heads of Jewish fraternal orders representing some of the 500 organizations making up the Council. The conference was held in the Nathan Lampert Auditorium of the University, Amsterdam Avenue and 186th Street.

Dr. Soltes told the conference of the "drastic curtailment" of Jewish students in American medical schools during the past quarter of a century. He said that this "un-American quota system based on the basis of race and religion" was "contrary to the public interests." He promised that when Yeshiva's projected medical and dental schools are opened "the only requirements for admission will be merit, ability and character, the truly American standards."

Mr. Levine warned against relegating education to a secondary category, saying that "there is no stronger defense than that of a well-educated and clear thinking leadership."

Professor Was Renowned Math Expert

Professor Abraham Wald and his wife of New York, were killed in an airplane accident in southern India. Dr. Wald, who was Professor of Mathematical Statistics at Columbia University, had gone to India to lecture at the Indian Statistical Institute of Presidency College in Calcutta.

Having left New York November 7, Professor Wald, who was considered one of America's leading authorities in the field of mathematical statistics, delivered lectures in London, Paris, and Rome en route to India. The plane in which he and Mrs. Wald died vanished on a scheduled flight from Madras to Trivandrum during rain and fog over the Nilgiri range.

Professor Wald was born in Cluj, Rumania, forty-eight years ago and received his undergraduate degree from the University of Cluj. He later studied at the University of Vienna, receiving his Ph.D. degree from that school in 1931. He came to the United States in 1933 and five years later was naturalized an American citizen.

Columbia University named him a lecturer in economics in 1939 and three years later he became professor of mathematical statistics. Dr. Wald served as president of the Institute of Mathematical Statistics and as vice-president of the American Statistical Association in 1948. He was a member of the American Mathematical Society and of the Econometric Society.

He was the author of "Sequential Analysis," published in 1947, and "Statistical Decision Functions," published in 1950. During World War II he served as consultant to the applied mathematics panel of the National Defense Research Committee. He was associate editor of the Annals of Mathematical Statistics. He was considered an outstanding authority on sequential analysis and sampling, and his work was the basis for many

United Jewish Appeal Needs $203,684,577 In 1951

Edward M. M. Warburg, chairman of the Joint Distribution Committee since 1946, was unanimously elected as general chairman of the U. J. A.'s annual conference at Atlantic City, N.J.

Mr. Warburg succeeds Henry Morgenthau Jr., who is expected to head the forthcoming program by the government of Israel to sell bonds in the United States to get capital into Israel. Mr. Warburg, forty-one, is the son of the late Felix M. Warburg, banker and philanthropist. The J. U. A., one of the agencies for which the United Jewish Appeal raises funds, has under Mr. Warburg's leadership assisted more than 1,000,000 Jews in twenty-five European and Moslem countries, of whom 600,000 have been settled in Israel, says the New York Herald Tribune.

During World War II Mr. Warburg enlisted in the Army as a private and was retired with the rank of major, having served in Europe.

Delegates to the conference adopted unanimously a resolution expressing to Mr. Morgenthau their "deepest appreciation and profound sense of indebtedness for his four years of self-sacrificing leadership and inspiration." He received a silver plaque expressing the same sentiments.

While no specific goal was set for the U. J. A.'s 1951 fund-raising campaign, a statement of needs was adopted showing that the three agencies comprising the U. J. A. will require $203,684,577.

The agencies for which the U. J. A. raises funds are the J. U. A., which assists Jews in Europe and elsewhere; the United Palestine Appeal, which helps in Israel; and the United Service for New Americans, which helps immigrants in the United States.

Mr. Warburg, in accepting the general chairmanship, said that Israel represents a beachhead of democracy in the Near East, "and it is urgent that we do all in our power to strengthen it."

Rudolph G. Sonnenborn, one of the three national chairmen of the U. J. A. and the head of the United Palestine Appeal, told the delegates that in Israel the emphasis is shifting from direct relief toward projects which will increase the basic productivity of the country.

The United Palestine Appeal, he said, plans to establish 120 new agricultural settlements in 1951 which will provide for 38,000 immigrants. Blueprints for regional and local irrigation systems in Israel have already been prepared, he said, to facilitate the intensive cultivation of the soil.

Benjamin G. Browdy, president of the Zionist Organization of America, pledged the complete support of that organization toward the U. J. A.'s fund-raising efforts.

"The Arab states," Mr. Browdy said, "which have not to this day reconciled themselves to the existence of the Jewish state, and

The volume of tourism in Israel has increased by almost 50 percent in the past year. Statistics for the first nine months of 1950 show that 25,581 tourists entered the country as compared with 17,189 in the corresponding period in 1949. It is expected that the figure for 1950 will reach 30,000, as compared with 21,971 in 1949. The Government has announced its decision to extend credits out of State funds to encourage the building of up-to-date hotels for tourists, to assign special hotels where austerity regulations will not apply for dollar-spending tourists, and to open special shops where visitors from abroad will be able to purchase goods for foreign exchange without restrictions.

DEATHS

Honore Meier Caiserman, founder and general secretary of the Canadian Jewish Congress, died suddenly at his home, 21 Maplewood Avenue, on Sunday, December 24, at the age of 57. He had just returned from a 10-day visit on Congress affairs to the Maritime Provinces. Mr. Caiserman, born in Mibon-Iomix, Roumania, had lived in Montreal for forty-four years. In 1912 he was a candidate for civic office here. He was one of the organizers of the Canadian Jewish Congress in 1919 and was elected general secretary of this representative institution of Canadian Jewry, a position he held throughout the existence of this first Congress. He was also among those who brought about the reorganization of the Congress in 1934, and he occupied the same position in the institution since. He visited every Jewish community in Canada repeatedly in connection with his work and was one of the best-informed authorities on the problems of Canadian Jewish life. Mr. Caiserman was also one of the founders of the World Jewish Congress and attended the founding session of this body in Geneva in 1936. In his capacity as general secretary of the Canadian Jewish Congress he worked energetically for Jewish immigration to Canada, especially in the years between the world wars. Mr. Caiserman was also deeply interested in the advancement of Jewish culture in this country. He was the author of a volume on the Jewish parts of Canada and had written innumerable articles in Yiddish and in English on literary subjects. Mr. Caiserman was one of the founders of the Jewish Immigrant Aid Society of Canada, a leader in the Poale Zion organization, officer in the Canadian Association for Labor Palestine, founder of the J. L. Peters Schools and the Jewish People's Schools in Montreal, and founder of the Jewish Public Library. Mr. Caiserman lived in Palestine for several years after the First World War and was director of the Central Bank for Co-operative Institutions in Jerusalem. He later visited Israel several times. For a time Mr. Caiserman was secretary in Montreal, Canada, of the Jewish People's Schools, and he was also the first representative of a Western Jewish community to enter that country since the German occupation. On his return, he toured Canada, the United States and South America, addressing Jewish communities on the condition of the surviving Jews of Poland. While in South America, he recognized the Jewish relief administration there on the pattern of the United Jewish Refugee and War Relief Agencies. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Sarah Caiserman, and three daughters, Miss Nina Caiserman, of New York; and Mrs. Alfred Pinsky and Mrs. Jacques Laki, of Montreal. Rabbi Chaim Bender, of Adath Israel Congregation, officiated at the funeral services, which were held at the Jewish People's School on Waverley Street. The family will set Shiva at the home. A guard of honor composed of leaders of the Canadian Jewish Congress and of the Labor Zionist movement stood over the bier until interment in the Jewish National Workers Alliance cemetery in Cartierville. Saul Hayes, national executive director of Congress, Moishe Dickstein, chairman of the Actions Committee of the Labor Zionist movement of Canada; J. I. Segal, the poet; and S. Wiseman, head of the Jewish People's Schools, spoke at the funeral. Messages were sent by Samuel Bronfman, president of the Congress; Samuel E. Schweisberg, national co-president of the Zionist Organization of Canada; J. Irving Gelboim, of Toronto, president at the Congress in Ontario, and Aronson Harmon, former Israeli Consul-General in Canada and now attached to the Israeli Embassy in Washington. Participants at the funeral were: Samuel Bronfman, Michael Geller, K.C.; Mon-roe Abbey, J. Berman, I. M. Babrow, Leon Chafetz, Simon Brikman, Allan Bronfman, Samuel David Cohen, Moshe Dickstein, Joseph H. Fine, K.C., J. Goldman, S. Green, Hyman Grover, Saul Hayes, Dr. S. B. and four grandchildren, Yael, Avital, and Yehudit, of Ein Hashofet; and Susan Esther, of New York. Funeral services took place from Paperman's, Reverend L. Syrek officiating. Shlomo Wiseman, principal of the Jewish People's Schools, and L. Zuker, of the Jewish Public Library gave memorial addresses. The funeral cortege stopped before the main Jewish People's Schools building where pupils and teachers of the upper grades were standing in tribute to the late Mr. Lazarus, who was one of the founders. Burial was in the cemetery of New Beth Yehuda Synagogue. Mr. Lazarus was born in Roumania, on September 15, 1878; and organized libraries there in every town in which he lived. He was an organizer of the Zionist movement, and a delegate to one of the early Zionist conferences called in preparation for the first Zionist Congress. He came to Canada in 1903, and was married in Montreal in 1905. In 1914, he was one of the first founders of the Jewish Public Library, donating a major portion of his private library to its first collection of books. In 1905, he had helped to organize the Poale Zion party here, and was active in it for over thirty years. In 1915, he was a founder of the Jewish People's Schools, and was an active worker, and a leader in the Schools until a few years ago. A leader also in the organization of the Va'ad Ha'or, he was active in its councils until a few months ago. He was an active participant also in the Library; the YIVO (Jewish Scientific Institute), and the Federation of Roumanian Jews of Canada; and had donated many original documents and materials of Jewish cultural interest to the Institute.

Roche Chirvint, who got to Israel after a sixty-day journey that took her three-quarters of the way around the world — from China across the Pacific, the Panama Canal, the Atlantic and the Mediterranean, is the oldest and possibly the liveliest of 300 refugees who arrived in the new state from China, to be cared for by Maabon, the agency established by the Joint Distribution Committee, the Jewish Agency and the Israeli Government for care and rehabilitation of aged, sick and handicapped newcomers in Israel. She says she does not know when she left her native Vilna — it was so long ago.

THE FISHERMAN: A TASHLICH LEGEND

BY A. A. DAVIDSON

He came around the corner into Dock Street and at once I noticed something odd about him — something I was aware of noticing, but was unable to pin down. The late September sun bathed his well-knit figure in soft light, and played warmly on his dark, keen face. As he came up to me, he looked at me rather intently, and would have continued by, but I suddenly put out my hand and stopped him. Then I wondered why. He gave me a sharp glance—something like the glance Mr. Cook, the High School principal, used to give the boys as he passed them in the street.

"Don't I know you?" I asked. He put down his suitcase slowly, and pushed his hat back on his forehead.

"Attah Yekudi?" he asked me. "Oh, you speak Hebrew!" I blurted out.

"I speak English, too," he said. "I just wanted to make sure you were Jewish. Since you are, I am bound to tell you that you stop me at your own risk." And with that, he raised his eyebrows, as if to say, "We-e-ll? And now what do you want?"

"What the devil do you mean?" I asked.

"Call me by my Jewish name," he said, and then I realized whom it was I had stopped on the street so familiarly. He nodded his head gravely. I groped for words, and stammered something about not wanting to keep him from his business. He chuckled scornfully.

"Don't give me that," he said. "Right now they all want to keep me from my business. Blowing shofars every morning, distracting me with their prayers—and all the rest, just to keep me from gathering evidence." This to me took on an aggrieved note.

"I've got my job to do, just like anybody else. I've got my rounds to make, and my reports to turn in too. And now you stop me with that silly pretense of having seen me before. Just be careful you don't see me again, that's all." And he made as if to depart. I put out my hand again.

"One more word out of you, and I'll say the Shema right in your face," I warned. He blanched and gnawed his lips.

"What have you got in that suitcase?" I asked him. He looked at me slyly. "I've been fishing," he said.

"Let's see what's in the suitcase," I directed him in pontifical tones. He started to protest, but I only got as far as "kel melech ne—" when his fingers were busily undoing the straps. He threw open the lid, releasing a briny odor

— briny, and yet — inside was a net, and a wicker creel. He opened the creel and I peeked in. At first I could see nothing, but then as they took shape, I withdrew a little. He reached in his hand and pulled one out. It was spikey and had a hard shell, and thousands of little hands.

"Look at this beauty," he said. "Spawned yesterday from the cast-off awayrah of a communal dignity. And this one—" he pulled out one that had no shell at all, but many tendrils that wrapped themselves around his hand—"this one came from the old mother of a middle-aged and unmarried daughter." He disengaged his hand and put these back in the creel.

His next step was a curious one: he put on a pair of leather gloves. He carefully inserted one hand in, and pulled out another specimen of his catch. Its upper surface was beautifully iridescent, but the lower surface contained a double-row of ugly suckling mouths, sharp-toothed and gaping. "Here you have something that a pillar of the community shook into the river. One of the most well-esteemed philanthropists that ever sweated his employees."

Back it went, and he took off the gloves, removing the rest with his bare hands. There was one in the shape of a rosette with a single petal missing; a faint pulse of life still beat in it. "Young girl whose sweetheart told her that his intent to marry her was the same as if they were actually married. She believed him — for a while."

The next one resembled a slug, but had several sets of claws that continued to tear feebly at its own body. "Head of a merchants' association — almost all Jewish — that decided to close their stores on Monday each week. They could have chosen Saturday, but they didn't." He gave me another sly glance.

"Want to see some more?" he asked. I had enough. I didn't even ask to be shown my own — I was afraid of what it might look like. He parked his catch up again and fastened the suitcase.

"Well, I'll be running along now, if you don't mind. I've got to bring these into headquarters." He went down the street, casting no shadows in the late September sun. As I watched him, I thought of the sins which had not been cast away, and my heart grew heavy.

This story is from Jewish Life.

The spirit of Brotherhood is the spirit of the American way of life. Harvey S. Firestone Jr., of Akron, Ohio, industrialist, said at the annual Chicago professional men's dinner of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. He added that the brotherhood implied no limitations, was positive in every respect and connoted recognition of all men as equals.

Notice To Organizations:

Space in the Meetings department of the Review is at a premium with demands for service increasing all the time. Therefore, all organizations and institutions requiring publicity are advised to instruct their contributors that in order to be sure of publication any current week news material should be in the Montreal office by five o'clock on Monday of that week. News for any department in the Review which is received earliest and submitted in the best condition for editing and printing is used first. Material should be typed double or triple space; first copy, no carbon; on one side of each sheet; and not on flimsy or colored paper. Material containing abbreviated or capitalized words; and names without correct initials; or without full first names for single women or girls is always omitted. The Review is here to serve. Make full use of publicity for the success of communal undertakings. If your news does not appear, there is a reason. Find out why.

MONTREAL MEETINGS

At a testimonial dinner given at the Mount Royal Hotel by the board of trustees of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies in honour of Samuel Bronfman, who retired as president, three major presentations were tendered to him by the Federation, of which he is the national president, and by over fifty organizations whose letters of appreciation for his leadership over the past two decades were bound, in a leather volume and handed to Mr. Bronfman on their behalf by Michael Hirsch, honorary president. In the absence of the president, David Kirsch, Jack A. Klein, O.B.E., first vice-president of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, presided. DOCTOR OPENS

FREE CLINIC FOR POOR

A South Jersey country doctor has come up with his solution to the medical medicine controversy. Dr. Benjamin Broselow began a free clinic of two hours each week, Mondays from noon until 2 p.m., for any indigent resident of Gloucester County who calls at his office at Broad and Center Streets, at Clayton, N.J.

Dr. Broselow, who also has an office at his home in nearby Franklinville, is a member of the State Medical Society and approves of that group's program of modified health insurance. However, says this physician whose patients are mostly rural residents, none of the plans announced thus far holds the happiest answer to the country or suburban dweller.

The Franklinville physician says his belief for years has been that if the medical profession is to combat successfully the doctrine of Government control of medical facilities, doctors in rural areas must provide free medical service to the indigent.

In the larger cities, he asserts, this need is taken care of by the large number of hospital clinics and social welfare agencies. However, in communities such as Clayton and Franklinville, he notes that patients must spend a dollar or two for transportation to and from such free clinics, thus defeating the purpose of the clinic.

"Ninety per cent of patients are honest," Dr. Broselow declared, "and they resent the method some clinics use to determine whether or not they can afford medical care. The result is that the patient often neglects to obtain medical care until it is too late. There will be no fee and no questions asked at this clinic. Each individual entering the clinic will be treated exactly as any private patient."

Thus, Dr. Broselow believes his private free clinic can overcome objections to socialized medicine and provide medical care needed for the indigent in Gloucester County.

GIVES NUCLEAR PHYSICS LAB TO BRANDEIS U.

Funds for the establishment of a nuclear physics laboratory at Brandeis University, in Waltham, Mass., have been given by Mr. and Mrs. Morris Falk, of Fitchburg, Mass. It was announced by Abram L. Sachar, President of the University. To be named the Morris Falk Nuclear Physics Laboratory, it will be housed in a recently-completed annex to Science Hall, the main classroom building.

Mr. Falk, the owner of the Independent Lock Company in Fitchburg, is a noted industrialist and philanthropist. He has for many years been strongly interested in the development of scientific research and in furthering the education of young men in science and engineering. His contribution to Brandeis is an extension of his interest in scientific study and research.

The Falk Nuclear Physics Laboratory at Brandeis will be equipped with the most modern facilities for study in this area of science, and will form an integral part of the broadened science curriculum. Designed for advanced instruction in the physical science, the laboratory will include a spectroscopy, work tables for electronic equipment, and tables for vacuum system installation.

Aiding two-year-old Brandeis in the development of its science program is Dr. Selman Waksman, discoverer of streptomycin and neomycin, who serves as Consultant in Science. Launched in the fall of 1948, Brandeis is the first non-sectarian institution of higher learning to be established under Jewish sponsorship.

having made careful preparations during the past year, the Hebrew University Institute of Oriental Studies has now announced the establishment of a research station for the study of Yeminite Jewry. Three hundred Torah Scrolls and about 2,000 other biblical books recently arrived in Israel by sea from the transit camp in Aden. The Scrolls and books had been carried from all corners of Yemen, and deposited in the camp to await transportation, which was delayed owing to lack of space in the Magic Carpet planes.

Baruch Presents Interfaith Medal

Herbert Bayard Swope received the 1950 Gold Medal Award of the Interfaith Action Committee at a $100-a-plate dinner in his honor at the Waldorf-Astoria, in New York. Before 1,500 persons of all faiths, Mr. Swope was cited for his "notable achievements in fostering interfaith and interracial understanding."

The award and citation were presented in behalf of the committee by Bernard M. Baruch. Speeches lauding Mr. Swope for his interfaith work were made by Robert P. Patterson, former Secretary of War; James A. Farley, former Postmaster General and chairman of the dinner; Justice George J. Roberts of the State Supreme Court, who was master-of-ceremonies; George A. Saltzman, president of the committee; and Louis Nizer, lawyer and author.

Proceeds of the dinner, it was announced by Arthur H. Konvitz, executive director of Interfaith in Action, will go to the committee's campaign for a $1,000,000 fund for an interfaith community center at the northwest corner of Seventh Avenue and Fortieth Street, the site of which has already been purchased for $500,000 of the fund's money.

Mr. Baruch read the following citation: "To Herbert Bayard Swope, whose outstanding career in journalism and public affairs, sustained by a brilliant clarity and insight, overcame all barriers in an eminently successful effort to uphold, serve and advance the cause of truth, tolerance and his country; whose extraordinary vitality and talents as a journalist and editor of world-renown won for him respect, admiration and a place among the great, who seek his counsel in affairs of business, the military, freedom and the state; whose varied posts of service are legion, but which all manifest a continuing striving against prejudice, bad sense and tyranny; for whose notable achievements in fostering interfaith and interracial understanding we present the 1950 Interfaith in Action Gold Medal Award."

Mr. Swope, former executive editor of "The World," was an adviser of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt and an Associate United States Representative on the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission. More recently he was chairman of the national celebration of the 150th anniversary of the adoption of the Bill of Rights in the United States Constitution. He is treasurer of Freedom House.

The speaker generally emphasized the need "for real and expanding interfaith and interracial understanding and the brotherhood of man, both to help avert the feared new war and to help free men meet the crisis better if it comes."

"With world conditions today as they are," said Mr. Farley, "brotherhood is more important than ever. Mr. Swope exemplified, through his activities with Freedom House and others in the past, the spirit of brotherhood in its finest sense."

Mr. Saltzman said that the "unparalleled seriousness of these times emphasizes a great need of our restoring stability and confidence to a shaken world. I have no magic formula to offer that will solve all our vexing problems, but this I know, unless we can create good will and understanding in the hearts of men, our best efforts will fail."

"The major problems which the nations face today are not political or economical, but those of human relations. We must resolutely face the fact that there are powerful and relentless forces in the world seeking to destroy human and religious rights. We who hold sacred the dignity and rights of all men must oppose these destructive forces with the unescapable logic of our practice of brotherhood."

"There is only one way preparation," said Mr. Nizer, "which is not subject to the waste of obsolescence. It is brotherhood. We must develop unity within our nation so as to make available our greater strength, but that unity and brotherhood is just as valuable when peace comes as when war is upon us."

Only Rabbi In Marine Corps Aids Men

Battle-weary American GIs who fought their way out of a Chinese trap in a 13-day running battle with the enemy, bitter cold and ice and snow-clogged roads, found some measure of comfort in the presence of the only rabbi in the U.S. Marine Corps, Chaplain Garrison Goodman, who maintained constant contact with American units during the retreat to Hungnam and Hamhung.

According to a report from Pfc. Sam A. Jaffe, Marine Corps combat correspondent, received by the National Jewish Welfare Board's Division of Religious Activities, Chaplain Garrison Goodman maintained contact with Marine units stretched over 70 miles from the 10th Corps Headquarters in Hamhung, holding religious services and extending comfort to Marine outfits all along the way. Half-frozen GIs who reached Hungnam and Hamhung after nearly a fortnight's heroic march under almost constant fire were heartened by the presence of Chaplain Goodman and Chaplain Milton Rosen of the Army. Both had on hand supplies of religious and morale materials shipped by the National Jewish Welfare Board. Chaplains Goodman and Rosen are two of the four Jewish chaplains on duty in Korea. Chaplain Oscar M. Lifshutz is in Seoul and Chaplain Joseph Messing is in Pusan.

Chaplain Goodman, who participated in the Inchon invasion and the liberation of Seoul before moving north of the 38th Parallel with United Nations troops, wrote many letters to parents whose sons were killed in action. Correspondent Jaffe reports that Goodman had countless letters to answer "from parents who asked the Chaplain to find out why their son wasn't writing home, or to find out how their son was getting along."

"When Chaplain Goodman was not in the lines or writing letters, one could find him in the First Marine Division Hospital, seeing to the wants of the wounded and sick, or organizing some religious ceremony." Only recently, the Marine Corps correspondent said, Chaplain Goodman was among a group of Army and Navy chaplains who were guest speakers at a special union service attended by several hundred Korean men and women, representing Hamhung's eight churches, "who gave their thanks and prayers to God and the United Nations."

In addressing the congregation, Chaplain Goodman said: "On behalf of all the Jewish faith in America, which I now represent, I want to greet you as brother and sisters, for we all are the children of one Father and have but one God. I know that God will bless you with peace and happiness once again very soon." After the ceremony, a number of the Korean elders gathered around the Jewish chaplain to inquire about the gold insignia he wore on his collar. The Ten Commandments topped with the Star of David. The Koreans were used to seeing the silver cross worn by chaplains of other faiths. Judaism was something new to them.

Chaplain Goodman, a native of Cleveland, entered the Navy as a chaplain in May 1949 after serving a congregation at Harlan, Ky. His wife, Ruth, is a school teacher in Chicago.

LAWYERS HONOUR NOTED JUDGE

Learned Hand, Chief Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, received the annual award of the lawyers' division of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies for service to the New York community.

The presentation was made at the annual dinner of the division at Sherry's, 300 Park Avenue. Among the 200 persons who attended were leading jurists of the Federal and state courts as well as New York attorneys prominent in civic and philanthropic activities.

The award, a bronze plaque, was presented by Robert P. Patterson, president of Freedom House, former Secretary of War and an associate of Judge Hand on the court in 1939 and 1940. The citation on the plaque read: "Annual Award for Distinguished Service to the Community presented to Judge Learned Hand, Chief Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, for his rich and varied achievements as judge, philosopher and scholar. For his love of humanity and dedication to the rights of man."
